YUGTO 2025 2.0: Empowering Student Leaders for Sustainable Action

Building on the energy and insights from Youthlead's 1st Sandugo Youth Impact Convergence, the YUGTO echo seminar was designed to equip student organizations with the practical skills and strategic mindset needed to translate their visions into tangible, impactful actions. This year's event, YUGTO 2025 2.0: Empowering Student Leaders for Sustainable Action, focused on empowering a new generation of leaders to ensure sustainable organizational management and community impact. The seminar concentrated on mainstreaming the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) in youth-led initiatives and included necessary training on organizational stewardship and accountability.

Originally scheduled for August 27-28, 2025, the event was postponed due to adverse weather but successfully pushed through on September 2, 2025. The original two-day program was condensed into a single day, filled with interactive and engaging activities, including a solidarity dance and exciting prizes. Attendees gained valuable insights from a series of distinguished speakers.

The seminar began with a comprehensive keynote address by Mr. Emanuel Mirus S. Ponon, founder and trustee of ASEAN Youth Advocates Networks (AYAN). He spoke on "The 2030 Agenda: Progress and Challenges at the Midpoint to the Deadline," highlighting the importance of the 17 SDGs and the crucial role of youth in achieving them. Following this, Ms. Josie Marpuri, an administrative aide from the Student Affairs and Services Office, began the Plenary Session 1 on "Student Organization Management: Documentation and Record Keeping," outlining the purpose of student organizations and the necessary requirements for accreditation. Ms. Shirley M. Illo, the Head of the Supervising Administrative Office, continued the session by highlighting the importance of transparent financial record-keeping for integrity and accountability in her talk, "From Funds to Function: Ensuring Accountability in Every Student Organization Transaction."

The second plenary session featured executives from the CSPC – Supreme Student Council, who provided practical guidance on key organizational roles. Hon. Ralph Joe Francis D. Abonal, the Head of the Secretariat, discussed "Beyond the Minutes: The Strategic Role of Student Organization Secretariat," focusing on essential documents and proper formatting. Meanwhile, Hon. Jessil C. Martinez, the Head of the Treasury Office, presented on "Budget to Impact: A Financial Officers' Guide to Responsible Leadership," detailing how organizational funds should be handled. Finally, Hon. Joberth B. Iballar, the Head of the Audit Office, delivered a talk on "Upholding Integrity: Auditing for a Transparent Student Organization," emphasizing the vital role of auditors in maintaining accountability.

After the talks, an open forum allowed attendees to address their concerns directly with the speakers. The seminar was a resounding success, equipping every participating student officer with new knowledge and a renewed sense of purpose.

Mass Induction and La Serata: The CSPCeans Acquaintance Party

The Supreme Student Council of Camarines Sur Polytechnic Colleges successfully conducted the Mass Induction of Student Organization Officers and the La Serata: The CSPCeans Acquaintance Party on August 29, 2025, at the CSPC Gymnasium. The activity served a dual purpose: to formally induct the newly elected officers of accredited student organizations and to strengthen camaraderie among students despite the academic stress.

The program commenced with the entrance of colors of the CSPC NROTC, followed by an invocation and the singing of Philippine National Anthem through an audio-visual presentation. A welcome message was then delivered by Dr. Amado A. Oliva Jr., the SUC President III of CSPC who emphasized the importance of leadership and service. This was followed by an inspirational talk from the guest speaker, Mr. Aljon S. Pogoy, the former NCF-CSG President who highlighted the role of student leaders within the institution. The main highlight of the event was the Mass Induction Ceremony, where newly elected officers of various student organizations were formally presented and sworn into office. The oath-taking ceremony was divided into four categories. First, the Oath of the Supreme Student Council administered by Dr. Amado A. Oliva Jr. Second, Oath of the College Student Council administered by, Mr. Aljon S. Pogoy. Then, it was followed by the Institutional-Based Organizations by Dr. Jocelyn O. Jintalan and lastly the college-based organization by the inducting officer, Dr. Jay L. Luzon. This ceremony not only symbolized the official recognition of the officers from various organization but also affirmed their responsibility to lead and represent their respective organizations. Afterwards, group photo was held to capture moments within the event. The event was concluded with a closing remark from Dr. Jay Luzon, Director of the Student Affairs and Services Office.

In the evening, the celebration continued with La Serata: The CSPCeans Acquaintance Party. This social gathering was filled with the lively performance of DJ Mathias. It provided a joyful opportunity for students from different programs and year levels to bond and build friendships. La Serata began with a Red-Carpet Walk featuring representative from different colleges and was followed by a Lip Sync Battle that added energy and entertainment to the event.

Overall, the Mass Induction and La Serata: CSPCeans Acquaintance Party was a notable success. It reinforced students and student leaders in celebration of student leadership, service, and solidarity.

Benefits Derived:

YUGTO 2025 2.0: Empowering Student Leaders for Sustainable Action

- Enhanced Practical Skills: The seminar moved beyond theoretical concepts to provide students with actionable, hands-on skills in core areas of organizational management. The sessions on documentation, record-keeping, and financial accountability gave attendees the practical knowledge they need to run their organizations effectively and transparently.
- Strategic Mindset and Vision: The event helped student leaders connect their local initiatives to a broader global agenda. By mainstreaming the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and discussing "The 2030 Agenda," the seminar inspired participants to think strategically about how their actions contribute to a more sustainable and impactful future, both within their communities and on a larger scale.
- Improved Accountability and Integrity: A significant focus of the seminar was on organizational stewardship, accountability, and integrity. The talks on managing finances, proper auditing, and handling documentation provided a clear framework for ensuring transparency. This directly benefits not only the organizations but also the communities they serve by building trust and responsible leadership.

Mass Induction and La Seara: The CSPCeans Acquaintance Party

- The Mass Induction gives student organizations recognition. This enhances their credibility to strengthens student body's trust towards their leadership.
- This event brought together student and student leaders from various organization.
- La Serata serves a fun and inclusive platform for students to relax and socialize beyond academic undertakings.
